The old man lamented greatly upon hearing this story and entreated her saying, "Please, please, stay among us longer."

She answered, "It is not up to me to decide. Please don't grieve, my father."

But the old man could not so easily surrender his only daughter who had brought him so much happiness. So he entreated the Emperor to come to his aid. Since the Emperor as well wanted Delicate Bamboo Princess to stay in the world, he sent two thousand of his strongest soldiers to guard the old man's house.

When the night of the full moon finally arrived, inside the house the old man held Delicate Bamboo Princess to prevent her escape, while on the roof the two thousand soldiers prepared to defend the house from the delegation from the moon.

Suddenly at midnight, the sky was filled with a dazzling light. As the beautiful celestial nymphs riding on clouds descended from the sky approached the house of the old man, the soldiers on the roof were paralyzed. Then the door of the house mysteriously flew open and Delicate Bamboo Princess glided into the garden. The nymphs told the old man that they had come to take their princess back to her home on the moon in the beautiful carriage awaiting her in the garden.

Delicate Bamboo Princess consoled her parents saying, "Thank you very much for taking care of me for such a long time. On the nights when the moon shines brightly, please look into the sky and remember me." After she wrote a letter to the Emperor advising him: "I'm going back to the moon. Truly I regret not having been able to serve you at your Court," she donned celestial robes and, lo and behold! she lost all the attributes of a human being. Surrounded by the celestial nymphs, the glorious carriage carrying the princess ascended into the sky and disappeared.
